r र The fifteenth (or, if we count the aspirates ch, kh, and ph as separate letters, the eighteenth) consonant of the Kāshmirī alphabet in the Roman character. It is the twenty-seventh (or, if we count t, th, and z, the thirtieth) consonant when written in the Śāradā or the Nāgarī character, and the fifteenth consonant when written in the Perso-Arabic character.

In the language of educated persons of the City, this letter is sounded much as in India, but is more dental than in the central portion of the Ganges Valley, where the sound is classed as cerebral. In Kāshmir, on the contrary, the sound is dental, and in village talk and in old poetry is not unfrequently interchangeable with that of a dental l. This fact is recognized by the Paṇḍits of the City, who have a stock phrase, ra-layōr aikyatā, signifying that r and l are identical in nature. In the modern speech of the educated, the two letters are nevertheless distinguished both in sound and in writing. On the other hand, in the old Kāshmirī of L.V. 74, we find chōr, a torrent, where the modern language has chūl; and, similarly, in H. viii, 13, we find the literary word mōl, a father, pronounced mōr by Hātim, the rustic narrator of the story. Cf. also such pairs as lubr and rudr, both names of the god Śiva.

In the village dialect r is often sounded something like the cerebral ṛ of India. This latter sound is not formally recognized in the literary language by the use of any special character, so that, e.g. from the spelling of the word कूर it is impossible to say whether a villager would say kūr or kūṛ. Paṇḍits do, however, implicitly admit the existence of this cerebral ṛ-sound by writing in certain words the letter ḍ, while, in attempting to illustrate the village pronunciation of the same word, they write r, the r in this case representing the cerebral sound. Thus, for their own dialect, they write kaḍun, to drag out, while, for the village dialect, they write karun, meaning thereby karun. Similarly they write the literary śhāḍun, to seek, but for the village dialect they write śhārun. Again, in the literary language, they have both garun and gaḍun, to make, in which the r of garun represents the ṛ of the village garun. This cerebralization of r is not uniform even in the village dialect, the sound varying from place to place, and sometimes, even in villages, we hear ḍ, not r, where the literary dialect has r. Thus, the literary word kūr, a girl, is pronounced kūḍ in the country near Bāramūla, where, according to El., s.v. kūḍ, 'there is a great tendency to change r into ḍ.' In the present work, which deals only with the literary, or standard, form of the language, the spelling of the Paṇḍits is followed, but, when their spelling of the village sounds is known, it is also given. Many instances of the interchange between ḍ and r will be found in H., pp. lxxix ff.

It is well known that, unlike the Indo-Aryan languages, but like the other Dardic languages, Kāshmirī has no hesitation in preserving unchanged an original conjunct consonant of which the second member is r. Thus, we have brōt, error, compared with the Skt. bhrānti; grōn, an eclipse, for Skt. grahana; phryūst, excellent, for Skt. praśasta; trih, three, for Skt. tri, and many others. Similarly, even when there was no original conjunct, we find such words as drōlid, Skt. daridra, poor; drōt, Skt. dātra, a sickle; dryuy, Skt. dēvara, a brother-in-law; kronḍ, Skt. karaṇḍa, a basket; krāl, Skt. kuḷāla, a potter; krēhon, Skt. kṛṣṇa, black; trēsh, Skt. tr̥ṣṇa, thirst; shrān, Skt. snāna, bathing; shrūkh, Skt. śloka, a verse; shrōtsun, to become pure, Skt. √śudh, and so on. There are several words in which the insertion of such a conjunct r is optional, the form with r being chiefly used by Hindūs, and that without r being chiefly used by Musalmāns. Such are brōth or bōth, in front; shrāth or shāth, a river shoal; and zrōḍ or zōḍ, a water-hole.

In schools, this letter, in the Śāradā character, whether standing by itself or the first member of a conjunct consonant is called raka rō रक रा. If it is the final member of a conjunct, as in the syllable kra क, it is called dutarikh डुतरिख.

The Sanskrit vowel ṛ sometimes appears in Kāshmirī writing, in borrowed words. It is said to be pronounced as ru र, as in krupun, niggardly, written कृपुन, in imitation of the Skt. kṛpana कृपणः; स स. The Kāshmirī dental sibilant. The sixteenth consonant of the Kāshmirī alphabet in the Roman character, the thirty-second (or, if we count ṣ, ṣh, and z, the thirty-fifth) consonant when written in the Śāradā or the Nāgarī character, and the eighteenth consonant when written in the Perso-Arabic character. The Kāshmirī name for character स is süssö. The letter is sounded like the s in the English word 'sin'. It is also used to represent the sound of the Arabic س (ṣ) and ص (ṣād), which, in Kāshmirī, occur only in words borrowed directly or indirectly from that language. In such cases they are both pronounced in Kāshmirī like an ordinary s.

The palatal sibilant is sh श, which is the thirtieth (or, if we count ṣ, ṣh, and z, the thirty-third) consonant when written in the Śāradā or the Nāgarī character, and the nineteenth consonant when written in the Perso-Arabic character. The Kāshmirī name for the character श is shēkar-shö. It is sounded like sh in the English word 'shell'. It is also used to represent the sound of the Sanskrit letter श ष, which, in Kāshmirī, is written by Paṇḍits in words borrowed directly or indirectly from that language. In such cases, in speaking Kāshmirī, it is pronounced like sh. Thus, the word pōsh पोश, a flower, is often written पोष by Paṇḍits because of the existence of the letter ष in the Sanskrit word puṣpa पुष्प with the same meaning. The Kāshmirīs call this letter ष 'phörī-shö'.

These sibilants, s and sh, are liable to various changes in Ksh., the principal of which will here be mentioned. When sh represents a single (i.e. non-conjunct) Sanskrit ś or ṣ, the ś or ṣ when taken into Kāshmirī, in the first place becomes h. Thus, śāka-, a vegetable, becomes Ksh. hāk-; śiraḥ-, a head, > Ksh. hir; śaśana-, garlic, > Ksh. rahun; śimśati-, twenty, > Ksh. wuh; śupariś-, sit, > vēh-; śpiś-, grind, > ṣpih-; śiṣa-, poison, > vēh; pāśca-, a rib, > (through pāśa-) pāh-; drādaśi-, the twelfth day of a lunar fortnight, > bāh; praśasta-, good, prahasta-, > phraasta-, > phrayasta-, > Ksh. phrēst- (see phryūst); and so on for many others.

While Skt. ś and ṣ thus become Ksh. h, it appears that the dental s does not undergo this change. The word shwās or shāh, breath (Skt. svāsa-), is only an apparent exception to this statement. If we compare the word with the Aryan śuśi, Avesta suśi, a lung, we see that it is an example of the fact that Kāshmirī is not, like the Indo-Aryan languages, descended from Sanskrit, but from an earlier Aryan dialect which in some respects is akin to Eranian. Instead of being descended from the Sanskrit śvāsa-, the word must come from some Aryan dialect in which the word was śvāsa-, or something of the sort.

When this Kāshmirī h, derived from ś or ṣ, is followed by y, ē, or ū-mātrā, it reverts to its original sibilant sound, and becomes again sh. Thus, the second past participle of the √pih-, given above, is pishyōv, not pihyōv, and the feminine plural of pyuh-, its first past participle, is pishē, not pihē. So, the oblique singular of bāh, the twelfth lunar day, is bōsh-, not bōh-.

The above cases, in which ś or ṣ has become h, are all instances in which the original sibilant has been standing alone. If, on the other hand, it forms part of an original conjunct consonant, the sibilant is preserved, and is not changed to h. Thus, the Skt. śruva-, a ladle, becomes Ksh. shrōv; and Skt. śloka-, a verse, becomes Ksh. shrūk-.

A further stage in this development is the frequent occurrence of pairs of words, in which one word has a single sibilant, and the other has a sibilant combined with a semi-vowel such as r or w. This occurs even when the semi-vowel is not original, as in Ksh. shrōṣ- or shōṣ-, purity, compared with the Skt. śauca-. Other examples are:— shrāṭh or shāṭh-, a sandbank; shrōṭh or shōṭh-, a corpse; shrithun or shithun-, to be congealed; so, with s, we have:— srōg or sōg-, cheap; swāl or sāl-, an invitation; swās or sās-, ashes.

In pairs of words such as the above, moreover, sh and s are frequently interchanged. Thus, shrōn or srōn-, moist; shrandā or srandā-, a bull (Skt. śaṇḍa-, in which there is no r); shrūnd or srūnd-, a casket; shrōng or srōng (Skt. suruṅga-), a mine; shranz or sranz-, tongs; shrav or srav-, a pinhole; shrawun or srawun, to ooze; and shrukun or sukun, to force into. In Ksh. sikanj, for Persian shikanja, a clamp, we have an apparent change of sh to s; but a reference to the Avesta skand-, from which it is derived, shows that the Kāshmirī word is not borrowed from Persian, but is descended from an Aryan dialect which has preserved the original s, while Persian has changed the original s to sh.

The Sanskrit conjunct sn optionally becomes sr (shr) in Kāshmirī. Thus, Ksh. shrān, srān, or snān, bathing, (Skt. snāna-); srēh or snēh, love, (Skt. snēha-). With these compare the shrūk < ślōka-, given above.

As explained s.v. ē (p. 3a, ll. 39 ff.), the inherent vowel of the letter sh is ē, not a, so that श must be transliterated shē, not sha. Kāshmirīs consider that the sound of the letter y is inherent in sh, so that they write indifferently श or य, each of which represents the same sound, viz. shē. In this way, the first past participles of shēkun, to doubt, and of shērun, to arrange, are, respectively, shyūk^a and shyūr^a, but they are quite commonly written shūk^a and shūr^a.

sa 2 स or (among Hindūs) साँ sō interj., a contraction of sōhib, Sir, used in polite address by a man to a man. It is the equivalent of the Hindi jī, and is appended as a kind of vocative suffix, with or without a preceding interjection, as in nārān sō, hē nārān sō, or he nārān juv sō, all equivalent to 'Nārān!' used respectfully, as if we should say 'Nārān, Sir!' (cf. kot^a-sa, p. 484a, l. 41; ada-sō or ada-kyā-sō, yes, Sir, p. 13a, ll. 45, 50; āhan-sō, id., p. 18a, l. 5) (El. sa, sah; Gr.Gr. 96; Gr.M.; L. 279, sa) so ha-sa (p. 351b, l. 42) and ha-sō (ib.), hata-sa or hata-sō (p. 355b, l. 11), and hata sō-hē (ib., l. 12) (H. ii, 4, 9; x, 1, 2, 5, etc.; xii, 1, 10).

With a prohibitive particle, we have ma-sō or (Rām. 1342) ma-sa, do not, Sir (p. 547a, l. 27).

Used also as a respectful interrogative suffix (Gr.Gr. 181; YZ. 494, 568). Cf. sōb.

In Hindū literature there are many groups of six. Thus, there are six attributes of the Deity, viz. (in Skt.) (1) sarvajñatā, omniscience; (2) tripti, contentment; (3) anādibōdha, having perception from eternity; (4) svatantratā, absolute self-sufficiency; (5) nityam-aluptasakti, having potency that is incapable of being diminished; (6) anantaśakti, omnipotence. There are six enemies, or sins which impede union with the Supreme, viz. (1) kāma, sexual desire; (2) krōdha, wrath; (3) lōbha, desire; (4) mada, arrogance; (5) mōha, delusion of mind; (6) matsara, jealousy. There are six ūrmis, or human infirmities, viz. (1) śoka, grief; (2) mōha, delusion; (3) jarā, old age; (4) maraṇa, death; (5) kṣudh, hunger; (6) pipāsā, thirst. There are six avasthās, or periods of human life, viz. (1) śīṣutva, babyhood; (2) bālya, childhood; (3) kaumāra, youth; (4) yauvana, puberty; (5) tārūnya, young manhood; (6) vārdhakya, old age. There are six vikāras, or changes of condition, in a man's life, indicated by the six verbs, (1) asti, he exists; (2) jāyatē, he is born; (3) vardhatē, he grows up; (4) ripariṇamatē, he is developed; (5) apakṣiyatē, he declines; (6) naśyati, he is destroyed (cf. L.V. 13, 82). There are six seasons of the year, viz. (in Skt.) (1) Śīṣara, or the cold season, comprising the two months Māgha and Phālguna (January–March); (2) Vasanta, or the spring, comprising the two months Caitra and Vaiśākha (March–May); (3) Grīṣma, or the summer, comprising Jyēṣṭha and Āṣāḍha (May–July); (4) Varṣā, or the rainy season, comprising Śrāvaṇa and Bhādra (July–September); (5) Śarad, or the autumn, comprising Āśvina and Kārttika (September–November); and (6) Hima, or the winter, comprising Agrahāyaṇa and Pauṣa (November–January); (cf. Rām. 423, 573, 661, 665, 908). In Yōga philosophy there are six cakras, or mystic circles, in the human body. These are (1) mūlādhāra, (2) saḍdhīsthāna, (3) maṇipūra, (4) anāhata, (5) viśuddha, and (6) ājñā. These are fully described in L.V. pp. 12 ff., to which the student is referred.

सुगमतया adv. easily, with facility (Gr.M.). sihul सिहुल m. (sg. dat. sihalas सिहलस्), N. of a game formerly played by Kāshmiri children. It is somewhat on the lines of backgammon. There are five dice, each consisting of a strip of wood, with one surface rounded and the other flat. The board consists of a circle marked on the ground with five or more radii, according to the number of players. One hundred and eighty small holes are dug in the circle, and eleven in each radius. A larger hole is in the centre where the radii meet. Each player moves his piece, starting from the centre, from hole to hole along one radius, round the circumference, and back along the same radius to the centre, its progress being regulated, as in backgammon, by throwing the dice. All five dice are thrown at once, and only those that fall round side up count. When all the players but one have got round and home, the remaining player has to pay his forfeit. This is done by each of the others putting his own five dice into the central hole and kicking them as far as he can. He then rides the loser as far as the most distant die; so also for the others.

The pieces are either cowries or pice or bits of potsherd. They are liable to capture as in backgammon, and the captured piece has to start again from the central hole. If all five dice fall round side up, it allows a move of 28 holes, and the player can play again. If fewer fall round side up the scores are of course much less, e.g. if there are four, the score is ten, and so on.

sān सान postpos. governing the abl. or optionally (in the case of singular (and occasionally plural) animate nouns and rarely inanimate nouns) the dat.; with, together with.

This word is distinguished from sūtin or sūty (qq.v.) by the fact that it implies that the governed word (not the thing or person accompanied) is the appendage, the other being the principal. Thus, mōlis-sūtin āv, he came with the father, implies that his father had brought him along, while mōlis-sān āv, would imply that he brought his father along with him (Gr.Gr. 45; Gr.M.; W. 97, 98; Śiv. 32, 71, 313, 368-9, 377, etc.; K. 374 (with sg. an.), 687 (inan.), 879 (pl. an.), 884 (inan. but governing dat.), 1017 (pl. an.), 1093 (sg. an.)).

kāpi-sān, entirely, p. 435a, l. 12; māna-sān, with deference, p. 573a, l. 21; rāhath-sān, p. 829b, l. 50; sōkha-sān, comfortably, p. 905b, l. 24; sīra-sān, secretly, s.v. sīr 1 (Śiv. 36, 56, 70, 85, etc.; Rām. 55, 750, 1200, 1203, 1370, 1499; K. 169, 543, 600, 610, 877, 996-7; H. i, 6; YZ. 455; K.Pr. 26, 82).

In such adverbial phrases, pōthⁱ may be pleonastically added, as in sōkha-sān pōthⁱ, happily, comfortably, securely (Gr.M.).

This word is used in special meanings in nal-sān, pimping, p. 631b, l. 47; shērāba-sān, a cup-bearer (p. 891a, l. 4).

sana 1 सन । रोगविशेषः m. the combined derangement of the three humours, failure of vital force at the conclusion of some long disease when the sufferer is dying or nearing death, coma, syncope (Rām. 1487); cf. sanapāth. —dōrith dyun^u —दोरिथ् दिनु । संनिपातहेतुरोगविशेषाविर्भावः m.inf. symptoms of syncope to declare themselves. —dyun^u —दिनु । रोगविशेषोद्भवः m.inf. syncope to come or declare itself. —lagun —लगुन् । संनिपातदगागमः m.inf. syncope to attack a person.

sana 2 सन or occasionally (e.g. K. 105, 369) san 2 सन् or sanā सना (i.e. sana + a 3) adv. an interrogative particle indicating doubt, hesitation, anxiety or the like. It is usually added to another interrogative word. Sometimes sana (not sanā) is added to the verb of a sentence. Thus kyā-sanā khēwān chuh (or chw-ā), (I wonder), is he eating; khēwān chw-ā-sana is he really eating (Gr.Gr. 180). It will be observed that the interrogative particle ā (see ā 3) can be used with this word (cf. amā-kyā-s°, p. 27a, l. 18; kar-sanā, p. 465a, l. 23; kati-s°, p. 483b, l. 39; kot^u-s°, p. 484a, l. 43; kūt^u-s°, p. 485a, l. 16; kētha-s°, p. 488a, l. 30) (Ā.V. 39, kyā-s°; Śiv. 47 (kus-s°), 1600 (id.); Rām. (kyāh-s°, etc.) 78, 202, 221, 253, 596, 834, 1074, 1143k, 1306, 1348, 1366, 1391, 1408, 1421, 1492-3; K. (marinā-san, why should he not die) 105, 369; (kyāh-sana, etc.) 165, 213, 287, 328, 608, 919, 1134; YZ. 187).

sand 1 सन्द । संयोगः, व्याख्यापाठः f. (sg. dat. sūnz^u संजु), joining, union, meeting (such as the confluence of two rivers, the meeting point between two lunar days, or between two changes of the moon); repeated study of some subject (cf. pāṭi-s^o, p. 789b, l. 15); repeated counselling over of an instruction, teaching, command, injunction, charge. —diñ^u —दिनु । पाठाध्ययनम्, अध्यापनम् f.inf. to read something over and over again in order to master it as an object of study; to teach (pupils, etc.), instruct (Gr.M.; K. 486, 500). —karūn^u —करनु f.inf. to impress instructions upon a person, to lay an injunction or command (upon, dat.), lay a charge (upon) (Rām. 1736). —pand lagūn^u —पंद लगनु । अविनयशिक्षापत्तिः f.inf. (of a boy, or the like) to be taught insolence, to learn to be saucy, presumptuous, brazen, etc.

sand 2 सन्द f. the morning, noon, and evening prayers of a Brāhmaṇa (i.q. sandyā, q.v.) (K. 410, 484).

sēnd सन्द سند । नदी, जलप्रसृतिः f. (sg. dat. sēndi सन्दि), a river (Rām. 1307, 1590); a perpetual waterfall; N. of a river of Kashmir (El. sind, RT. Tr. II, 418, Sindhu; Śiv. 1561, 1589, 1682, 1793, 1840, 1889).

sēnda-wōn^u सन्द-वोनु । सैन्धवजलम् m. the water of the Sēnd river (El. sindaṣāin).

sēnda-wār^u सन्द-वार । सेनानिवेशः m. an army encampment.

sōnd सन्द m. the confluence of two rivers (cf. sōn^u 1 and sand), used in the following compound:— sōnda-brōr^u सन्द-ब्राह्म । त्रिसंध्याचेचम f. N. of one of the holiest of Kashmir holy places, the sacred spring of the goddess Sandhyā, called in Sanskrit Trisandhyā. It is said at certain periods in the early summer to flow intermittently, three times during the day, and three times during the night. It is situated in the Bring Pargana in the south-east of the Valley (RT. Tr. II, 469, Sundabrār, El. Sundabrār, Śiv. 1168).

sond^u सन्दु । संबन्धी adj. (f. sūnz^u संजु), a postposition of the genitive case, used with m.sg. animate nouns. It governs the dative case. Its original form was hond^u. Every masculine dative singular ends in s, as in sūras, to a thief; mōlis, to a father. When hond^u was suffixed to such a word, the h was elided, so that the postposition apparently became sond^u, as in sūra-sond^u of a thief, for sūras-hond^u, or mōli-sond^u, of a father, for mōlis-hond^u (Gr.Gr. 40). See hond^u.

This word has the usual meaning of the genitive, viz. 'of', 'belonging to' (Gr.Gr. 40; L.V. 105, 108; Rām. 271, 509, 510, 538, 631, 957, 1332, 1439, etc.; K. 7, 30, 35, 47, 49, 66, 190, 323, 344; H. ii, 5, 6, 7, 9, etc.).

As has been seen sond^u is used with masculine animate nouns. Hond^u is used with all feminine nouns and with all plural nouns. Masculine singular nouns which indicate proper names of persons, however, take un^u while masculine inanimate nouns take uk^u (Gr.Gr. 41). There are, nevertheless, occasional exceptions. Thus, the gen. of Brahmā, the N. of a god, is Brahmā-sond^u, p. 121a, l. 34; so Vishṇu-sond^u, Rām. 23; Yindrāza-sāndi pōthi, Rām. 1737.

Again, sond^u is used with certain inanimate nouns to indicate 'made of' (Gr.Gr. 41). Thus, sōna-sond^u chath^ar, an umbrella (made) of gold, while sōnuk^u chath^ar, would mean 'an umbrella belonging to gold'; so marīna-sond^u, made of merino; pash-mīna-s^o, made of cloth (p. 781a, l. 30); rōpa-s^o, made of silver (p. 840a, l. 25) (Rām. 890, 1143j; K. 401, 920, 1007, 1037; H. v, 1, 3-5).

sandēh संदेह m. doubt, uncertainty, apprehension, mistrust (L.V. 7).

sāndij संदिज् । सर्षपः f. the mustard plant; the mustard seed (K.Pr. 184); a kind of rape plant, Brassica campestris (L. 330, sāndijī). Cf. sarshēph.

sāndija-phulay संदिज-फुलय् । सर्षपपुष्पविकाशः f. the season of the flowering mustard plant (early spring). -til -तील् । सर्षपतैलम् m. mustard-oil. -zōlī dinī -ज़ालि दिनि । अतिसूक्ष्मेक्षिकया प्रवर्तनम् m. pl. inf. to close the interstices of the fingers for mustard-seed, i.e. to hold a handful of mustard-seeds with the fingers tightly closed together, so that not a single tiny seed escapes; met. to scrutinize with excessive minuteness (esp. when it is absurd to do so). Hence, sāndija-zōlī dinī, hēndavēnda nīrith ṣalānī, to close the fingers tightly in order to save mustard-seed, and pumpkins to escape and run away, i.e. to be penny wise and pound foolish (cf. K.Pr. 184).

sondukh संदुख् or sondūkh संदूख् । पेटकः m. (sg. dat. sondu(ū)kas संदु(दू)कस्), a box, trunk, chest, coffer, case (Gr.M.; Rām. (sandūkh) 16, 623; K.Pr. 14). sonduka-han संदुक-हन् । लघुपेटकः f. a small box or chest, a casket. -thāna -ठान m. the lid of a box (Gr.M.). sūty सूत्य [also written sūti¹ सूति or (m.c. Rām. 1594, 1611) sūti सूती] or sūtin सूतिन् adv. and postpos. governing dat. or abl. (El. set, seth; W. 98, sōt¹).

A. adv. with, together, in company, as a companion [(sūty) Rām. 870, 953, 1686, 1756; K. 780; H. vii, 5; x, 14; xii, 2, 16; (sūtin) Rām. 855; K. 727]. Cf. also bel.

B. Postpos. governing dat., with, together with, associated with, (striving) with, it being implied that the person or thing accompanied is the principal, and he who (or that which) accompanies is the appendage.

Thus in mōlis-sūty (or sūtin) āv, he came with the father, it is implied that the father is the principal, while the son who came is the appendage, i.e. that the father brought the son along with him. If the superiority of the parties is reversed, we must use sān (q.v.) instead of sūty. Thus mōlis-sān āv, indicates that the father is the appendage so that it is implied that the other brought his father along with him [Gr.Gr. 44; Gr.M.; (sūty) L.V. 57, 92; Śiv. 12, 23, 38, 69, 84, 114-5, 164, 182, 196, 240, 278, 353, 432, 519, 593, etc.; Rām. 35, 73, 88, 103, 120, 171, 176, 327, 330, 428, 435, 448, 484, 530, 611, 690, 705, 803, 848, 904, 943, etc.; (in Rām. 152, 701, the postpos. governs a pron. suff. attached to a verb); K. 200-1, 211, 279, 286 (pron. suff.), 287-8, etc.; H. iii, 7, 8; v. 7, 10; vii, 6; viii, 3, 7, 11, etc.; YZ. 93, etc.; (sūtin) Śiv. 160, 527, 799, 1460, 1664, 1688; Rām. 361, 1027, 1639, 1647-8, 1677, 1691 (in the foregoing in Rām. the postpos. governs a pron. suff. attached to a verb), (governing dat.) 31, 90, 94-5, 106, 142, 317, 469, 488, etc.; K. 727 (pron. suff.), 748; H. i, 7; YZ. 23].

Occasionally, in poetry, we find this word governing the dat., when we should expect the abl. Thus (sūtin) Rām. 33, satas sūtin pū^u, filled with truth; 838, tas sūtin (for tami s^o) for that reason, therefore.

C. Governing abl., with, by means of (indicating the instrument). Thus, shrāki-sūtin, (cut) with a knife (cf. ami-(amiy)-sūty, p. 55a, l. 12, p. 55b, l. 8; atha-s^o, p. 62b, l. 40) [Gr.Gr. 20, sūtin; 47; Gr.M.; (sūty) L.V. 25; Śiv. 13, 17-19, 27, 51, 92, 170, 191, 239, 254, etc.; Rām. 6, 16, 47, 233, 449, 479, etc.; K. 5, 154, 165, 171, 232, 247, etc.; H. v, 4; vii, 19; viii, 7; x, 8; xii, 12, 16, 17; YZ. 35, 50; (sūtin) Śiv. 23-4, 130, 191, 269, 281, 505, 590, 746, 992, etc.; Rām. 409, 435, 457, 478, 480, 582, 703, 839, 1006, 1176, 1200, 1376, 1411, 1648; K. 646; H. ix, 5, 12; YZ. 79]; of, resulting from, with (denoting material, race, stock, etc.), in accordance with; sērē mēti sūty, bricks (made) of clay; āba-s^o (filled) with water, Gr.M.) [(sūty) Śiv. 58, 512, 919, 1200, 1245, 1474; Rām. 285, 1022; K. 231, 350, 414, 921; (sūtin) K. 984]; in consequence of, by reason of, on account of, owing to, with, by, of, through (bōchi sūty, dying of hunger, Gr.M.) [(sūty) L.V. 83; Śiv. 26, 102, 110, 165, 167, 207, 214, 229, 248, 251, etc.; Rām. 230, 377, 533, 781, etc.; K. 13, 51, 61, 91, 175, 230, 301, etc.; (sūtin) Śiv. 128, 170, 471; Rām. 96, 199, 200, 603, 655, 828, 1117, 1189, 1192, 1194, 1210, 1221, 1374, 1377, 1379, 1545, 1567, 1618; K. 424, 625].

Instead of the ablative, we may use the ablative masculine of the genitive. Thus (from dēka) dēkaki sūtin, by means of the forehead; guri-sūtin or guri-sandi sūtin, by means of a horse [Gr.Gr. 47; (sūty) Śiv. 361, 1018, 1509, 1592-3, 1642; Rām. 176; K. 583; H. i, 3; v, 5; vi, 16; vii, 10, 13; x, 4; (sūtin) Śiv. 171; H. i, 4].

In this sense, it sometimes forms a kind of adverb or other indeclinable, as in avēz^a-sūty, with incorrectness, i.e. wrongly, p. 71a, l. 5; būkt^a-s^o, courteously, K. 574; devotedly, K. 704; dayāy¹-s^o, with kindness, i.e. please! p. 267a, l. 3; Śiv. 1223, 1319; gōḍa-s^o, with the beginning, i.e. from the first, p. 277a, l. 41; lōla-s^o, affectionately, K. 523; mana-s^o, with the heart, cordially, p. 572a, l. 42; [(sūtin) Śiv. 192, 438, 504, 1411].

Occasionally, in poetry, we find this word governing the abl., when we should expect the dat. Thus:—(sūtin) Rām. 1097, pōshau-s^o kul^a, a tree with flowers.

sūtin suv सुतिन् सुव postpos. (governing dat.) in close contact with, (of place) right inside, in (or into) the very heart of (Rām. 606).

sūtinay सूतिनय, emph. form of sūtin, with, in company with (Śiv. 647, 684).

sōtiy सांतिy or sūtiy सूतिy, emph. form of sūty, as in tīm chih bāzi-sūtiy dōh nibāwān, they live only by deceit (Gr.M.; so L.V. 25; Śiv. 1611; K.Pr. 107, suēti; id. 208, sūtī dugah (i.e. sūtiy dōga), by means of pounding, by continued pounding, by blow after blow).

sūty(sūtin) anun सूत्य(सूतिन्) अनन् m.inf. to bring with one, to bring along ((sūty) Śiv. 717, 1670; K. 494; (sūtin) Rām. 971). —bōj^a —बोज् m. one who accompanies, a companion, friend, associate (Śiv. 1832); a follower, a servant (Śiv. 169). —hyon^a —ह्यन् m.inf. to take a person (along) with oneself, to bring (a person) along, to bring in one's train [(sūty) Śiv. 169, 629, 805, 955, 1116, 1172, 1419–20, 1456, 1459, 1581, 1672 (pānas sūty hyon^a), 1836; Rām. 1039, 1100, 1323, 1554, 1698, 1758; K. 14, 24, 28, 83, 203, etc.; H. ii, 1; v, 6; YZ. 88; (sūtin) Rām. 1322; K. 647]. —nyun^a —निन् m.inf. to take (a person) with one, to take a person along (Śiv. 1380, 1676 (pānas sūty nyun^a); Rām. 953; K. 69 (pānas sūty n^o), 196 (id.), 203 (id.), 283 (id.), etc.). —pakun —पकुन् m.inf. to go along in company, to accompany, be a fellow traveller (with, dat.) (Rām. 870). —pakawun^a —पकवुन् n.ag. (f. —pakaviūn^a —पकविन्), a fellow traveller (El. set-pakawun).

sūty-sūtin सूत्य-सूतिन् adv. accompanying, in company (with a person) (Śiv. 1115, 1134). sūty-sūtinay सूत्य-सूतिनय, id. (Śiv. 636). sūty-sūtin hyon^a सूत्य-सूतिन् ह्यन् m.inf. to take (a person) along with one. sūty-sūty सूत्य-सूत्य adv. and postpos. with, together (with, dat.), in one company, in society (with) (Śiv. 94, 986, 1054, 1154, 1362, 1445, 1581; Rām. 871, 1779; H. vii, 5; YZ. 25). sūty-sūtiy सूत्य-सूतिy adv., i.q. sūty-sūty (Śiv. 1186).

The word sūtin is naturally scanned in poetry as two long syllables (— —) as in Rām. 96, dapan^sh bīma-sūtin gāsa hēth āv, but occasionally it is scanned as — — — — —, as in Rām. 95, korukh hārēn-sūtin brāryan vēsāpōn^a. In both these lines the metre is — — — — —. In 95 the scansion of vēsāpōn^a is irregularly — — — — —. Other examples of — — are Rām. 469, 530, 606, 626, 917, 1097, 1163, 1189, 1200, 1280, 1389.

swa(sō) स्व adj. and pron. own; self. This is a Skt. word, and occurs only in borrowed Skt. compounds.

Owing to the fact that ica following a consonant, and u in borrowed words, are both, in Ksh., pronounced as ō, this word is frequently employed to suggest a double meaning, as in the following:— swa-darshēna-myūḥ स्व-दर्शन-म्यूल m. union with the Self (i.e. God) (brought about) by visiting (holy places), or union (brought about) by the excellent visiting (of holy places) (sō-darshēna-myūḥ) (L.V. 36). swa-man-bāg स्व-मन-बाग m. the garden of one's own heart, or a jasmine garden (sōman-bāg) (L.V. 98 = K.Pr. 18). swa-mana-sōth^h स्व-मन-सोथ m. the embankment of (the illusions of) one's own mind, or (suman-sōth^h) an embankment with crazy bridges (sum) (L.V. 98). swa-para-vēṣār स्व-पर-वज्रार m. discrimination regarding the Self and the Supreme or discrimination regarding Him who is excellently supreme (sō-para-vēṣār) (L.V. 28). swa-vēṣār स्व-वज्रार m. discrimination on one's own Self, or sō-vēṣār good discrimination (L.V. 71, 79). Cf. sō-vēṣār.

swa-rūph स्व-रूप m. own form, i.e. the nature (of anything), identity with, as in kha-swarūph, He who is identical with absolute vacuity, the impersonal Supreme Deity (L.V. 15); niza-swarūph, the nature of what is one's own, the nature of Self (L.V. 67). swa-swarūph स्व-स्वरूप m. (sg. dat. -swarūpas -स्वरूपस), a person's own form or nature (cf. sōrūph) (Śiv. 12, 1069). swa-swayēm स्व-स्वयम् m. one who is one's own self, one who is the Self (an epithet of the Deity) (Śiv. 1850).

t त्. The seventeenth (or, if we count the aspirates ch, kh, and ph, and also the sibilant sh, as separate letters, the twenty-first) consonant of the Kāshmirī alphabet when written in the Roman character, the sixteenth (or, if we count t, th, and z as separate letters, the nineteenth) consonant when written in the Śāradā or in the Nāgarī character, and the fourth consonant when written in the Perso-Arabic character. Its Kāshmirī name is tōv तोव. It is sounded nearly like the dental t of India proper, but the dental colour is not so decided, and the letter is liable to be confounded with the cerebral ṭ (q.v. bel.). It is also used to represent the Arabic letter ṭ (ṭō), which, in Kāshmirī, occurs only in words borrowed directly or indirectly from that language. In such cases, the ṭ is pronounced in Kāshmirī like an ordinary t.

The aspirate of t is th थ, which is the seventeenth (or, if we count t, th, and z as separate letters, the twentieth) consonant of the Kāshmirī alphabet when written in the Śāradā or in the Nāgarī character. Its Kāshmirī name is thōsh थोश.

When the letter t is followed, in a Kāshmirī word, by ü-mātrā (but not when followed by i or i-mātrā) it is changed to ṭ. Thus, the nominative plural of the base rāt-, night, is rōṭ. Similarly, ty becomes ṭ, and tē becomes ṭa. Thus, the 2 p.p. of katun, to spin, is katōv (for kathyōv), and from the base tat-, hot, we have the abstract noun tabar (for tatēr), heat. In the same way, the aspirate th becomes ṭh, as in wōth-, arisen, feminine wōth; the 2 p.p. of wōthun, to arise, is wōshōv (for wōthyōv); and from the base wath-, free, we have the abstract noun washar (for wathēr), freedom. See Gr.Gr. 28; Gr.M., p. 22.

ṭ त̣. The eighteenth (or, if we count the aspirates ch, kh, and ph, and also the sibilant sh, as separate letters, the twenty-second) consonant of the Kāshmirī alphabet when written in the Roman character, the eleventh (or, if we count t, th, and z as separate letters, the fourteenth) consonant in the Śāradā or in the Nāgarī character, and the fifth consonant in the Perso-Arabic character. Its Kāshmirī name is ār मार. It is sounded approximately like the cerebral ṭ of India proper, but it is not so decidedly cerebral, being more nearly post-alveolar, so that it is liable to be confused with the dental t dealt with in the preceding article.

The aspirate of ṭ is tḥ थ̣, the twelfth (or, if we count t, th, and z as separate letters, the fifteenth) consonant of the Kāshmirī language when written in the Śāradā or in the Nāgarī character. Its Kāshmirī name is sar māṭha सर् माँठ.

When the letter ṭ is followed in a Kāshmirī word by i, ē, or y (but not when followed by i-mātrā or ü-mātrā) it is changed to c च. Thus, the base paṭ-, a board, has its nominative singular pūṭ, but its ablative singular is paci, its nominative plural is pacē, and its ablative plural pacyau. Similarly, in such cases, the aspirate tḥ becomes ch च. Thus, kāth-, a stalk, nominative singular kōth, ablative singular kāchi, nominative plural kāchē, and ablative plural kāchyau. See Gr.Gr. 29; Gr.M., p. 22.

Allusion has been made above to the tendency observable in Kāshmirī to confuse the dental t and th with the cerebral ṭ and tḥ, respectively. So strong is this tendency that Kāshmirī poets do not hesitate to rhyme a word containing a dental letter with another containing a cerebral. For instance, in Rām. 699, the word Yind^{ar}zith is rhymed with dīth, and, in 872, with bīth,—rhymes which would be unthinkable in India Proper, where there is a sharp distinction between the sound of th and that of tḥ. In the following words there is confusion between initial t (th) and ṭ (tḥ):—tāḍav or ṭāḍav, swelling; tōg or ṭōg, an elephant-goad; thōba or tḥōbba, a sherd; thēla, a bag, compared with the Hindī thailā; thand, cool, compared with the Hindī thandā; thingun or tḥingun, a pretty child; thāpēra or tḥāpēra, a slap; tālun or ṭālun, to displace; tōth or ṭōt, cotton-seed; tōth or ṭēth, self-conceit; tōth or ṭōth, a filament; tōthun or ṭōthun, to be pleased; tatarārav or ṭatarārav, pattering; tyōth, bitter, as compared with Skt. tikṭa-, H. titā. The following are a few examples of the same tendency in regard to letters that are not initial:—phītun or phīṭun, a rag; pītun or pīṭun, to become weary; musht-, a fist, compared with Skt. muṣṭi-; and pāthun, to become, compared with pāthi (p. 794a, l. 13), may it become. There are many other similar cases that have not yet been collected.

ta 1 त conjunct. and (W. 99 ta; L.V. 3, 4, 13, etc.; Śiv. 12, 13, 39, 43, etc.; Rām. 22, 68, 85, 87, 98, etc.; K. 18, 21, 24, 31, 36, 53, etc.; H. i, 5; iii, 5; v, 4, 9, 12, etc.).

This conjunction is used to connect single words in the singular number, as in suh ta t^h, he and thou. For connecting plural words, ti (q.v.) is used in preference to ta, as in mahanivⁱ ti gupan ti āy, both the men and the cattle came (Gr.Gr. 255); but this distinction is not always observed in conversation.

If it is required to connect clauses, instead of words, biyē is generally used (El. s.v. tah; so Śiv. 163, 799; YZ. 82), but ta is also occasionally employed for this purpose (see Gr.M., s.v. for examples; so, e.g., Rām. 123, 135-6, 221, 867, and elsewhere).

ta sometimes has a slightly adversative sense, almost equivalent to 'but' as in jism chuh fōnī, ta rūh chuh bōkī, the body is mortal, and (or but) the soul is immortal (Gr.M.; K.Pr. 152, 178).

na-ta 1 न-त, and not, nor (see p. 618a, l. 3); yā . . . na ta, either . . . or (W. 153); na . . . ta na, neither . . . nor (W. 153); na . . . na . . . ta, not . . . nor . . . nor (L.V. 15).

ta biyē त बिय, conjunct. and also, moreover, (this) as well as (that) (Gr.M.; Rām. 124, 1389, 1534). ta . . . biyē त . . . बिय, conjunct. both . . . and (H. viii, 9). ta . . . ta त . . . त, conjunct. both . . . and.

With emph. y, ta becomes tay 1 or tōy 1, qq.v. ta 2 त, conjunct. then, so, accordingly, therefore (L.V. 21, 30, 33, 42, etc.; K.Pr. 173); then, and then, and next, thereupon (L.V. 1, 4, 19, 23, etc.); then, and then, thereafter, but (L.V. 98); then, so that (L.V. 66); then, indicating the apodosis of a conditional, or quasi-conditional, sentence (Gr.M.; L.V. 2, 27, 55, 87; H. ii, 7; iii, 4; vii, 9; viii, 10); or the antecedent clause of a relative clause (L.V. 61).

Sometimes ta connects a conjunctive participle with the main verb of a sentence, as in yēd phōllavith ta mōyē, having distended her belly, (then) she died (Gr.M.). This last idiom is especially common in K. 553, 582, 838. Typical examples will be found in K. 553, 582, 838.

Added to an Imperative, something like the Hindi tō, ta makes it polite, as in kar, do; kar-ta, please to do (Gr.Gr. 249. Cf. K. 201, 1174; K.Pr. 238, tai for tay 2, see bel.).

This word is often almost untranslatable, or equivalent to 'in fact', 'forsooth' and so on, as in bōh ta suh zānan-na, (how can I judge him) I, in fact, don't know him (Gr.M.; H. viii, 9). Sometimes it has the force of 'still', 'nevertheless' as in katiy rūz'tan, ta nākhōsh^y chuh, stay where he may, still he is unhappy (Gr.M.; so L.V. 60). It is sometimes a pure expletive, as at the end of two lines of every verse in K.

With emph. y, ta becomes tay 2 or tōy 2, qq.v. na-ta 2 न-त or na-tay न-तय is used to mean 'or else' 'otherwise' (see p. 618a, ll. 4, 11); yā-tay . . . na-ta, either . . . or else (K.Pr. 239).

tā ता ३ preposition, to, until, as far as (Rām. 259, 797, 1058 tā ba-i-hāl, up to the present time); adv. as long as, whilst (YZ. 7).

tai another spelling of tay 1, 2, and 3, qq.v.

ti 2 ति, adv. and conjunct. also, indeed, even, as in suh ti t^h ti, he also, thou also (Gr.Gr. 255); tō-ti (Hindī tau bhī), even then, etc., see tōti; kari-ti, he will indeed make (Gr.Gr. 180; Gr.M.; W. 99, 153; L.V. 32, 48, 106; Śiv. 3, 21, 73, 119, 171, 211, 364, 498, 582, 622, 656 (tī m.c.), 704, and elsewhere; Rām. 166, 216, 236, 262, 295, etc.; K. 18, 20, 26, 48, 61, etc.; H. ii, 4; vi, 11; viii, 5, 8, etc.; K.Pr. 146).

ti is also used as a conjunct. connecting plural words (ta 1, q.v., being used to connect singular words), as in mahanivⁱ ti gupan ti ay, both the men and the cattle came (Gr.Gr. 255; W. 153; Śiv. 1776; H. iii, 8). ti na . . . ti na, neither . . . nor (W. 153). ti ta ति त conjunct. and also (K. 611). titi 1 ति ति, that also (K. 582), see tih, but ti . . . ti 2, ति . . . ति, conjunct. both . . . and (H. x, 13; xii, 12).

Added to an indefinite pronoun, it strongly emphasizes the indefiniteness, as in kāh ti, anyone even, anyone at all (p. 390a, l. 12; H. i, 5; vii, 23); kēh ti nā, nothing at all (L.V. 9, 11; so Śiv. 1072, 1476; Rām. 710, 1295, 1492; K. 78, 87, 97, etc.); kāsh ti nō sath, no substance at all (L.V. 41); kōh ti na khēth, no harm at all (L.V. 77); so kāh ti (Rām. 164, 1497); kēh ti (H. viii, 9).

In the sing. this pronoun is an. or inan., and the an. forms in some cases distinguish between the masc.
and fem. genders. As regards the plural, see above.

When this word is used as an adjectival pronoun, the inanimate forms, with one exception, are not employed. The only exceptions are tath तथ, the inan. dat. sing., and (very rarely) tīh तिह, the inan. nom. sing. The former is used only as an adjective when agreeing with an inan. noun of either gender in the dative singular. In other cases, when an adjectival use is required, the animate forms are used, according to gender, even when agreeing with an inan. noun, except that the adjectival feminine dative is tāmī तमि as well as tamis tamis, although, when used substantively, only the an.

form tamis तमिस् is used for the feminine as well as for the masculine. When agreeing with a genitive, the usual rule for adjectives is observed. When the genitive is the genitive of a masculine singular inanimate noun, and therefore ends in uk^u, etc., the pronoun is put into the ablative singular, and, when the genitive is not of this description, the pronoun is put into the dative singular. Thus, suh (not tīh) jahāza, that ship; sa (not tīh) shēlph, that art; but tath (not tas or tamis) kulis, to that tree (inan.
m. sg. dat.); tath kāmē, for that work (inan. f. sg. dat.); tāmī (m. sg. abl.) chizuk^u, of that thing;
tas (m. sg. dat.) sōhiba-sond^u, of that gentleman;
tāmī (not tamis) jiyāyē-hond^u, of that place.

It therefore follows that the nominative singular inanimate form tīh, it, that, is hardly ever used as an adjective, but is used almost always as a substantive.
But suh and sa, the masculine and feminine forms, are also used as substantive inanimate forms, instead of tīh, when the pronoun is correlate to a preceding adjective pronoun that (as all these pronouns follow the same rules) is used, though inanimate, in the animate masculine or feminine gender, as explained above for adjectival suh and sa. The preceding pronoun is usually the relative, as in yus asbāb tōhē hyot^uwa, suh (not tīh) chuh drōg^u, what property you purchased, that is dear; yēmi murāda khōt^ura tē sōzōthas bōh, suh (not tīh) sapod^u pūra, the purpose for which you sent me has been fulfilled; tē yōssa kitāb mē lüz^uth, sa (not tīh) āyē mē khōsh, the book which you sent me, was acceptable to me. The preceding pronoun is not necessarily a relative; thus, suh phal chuh tōk^u, suh (not tīh) ma khēh, that fruit is sour, do not eat it.

When, however, the demonstrative pronoun is correlate to a substantive inanimate pronoun, tīh is used, as in yih bōh wanān chus, tīh chwā poz^u kina apoz^u, is what I say true or false? Also, as the pronoun yih, this (not the relative pronoun yih, what), in the direct singular, is the same in form for both genders, whether animate or inanimate, when the substantive demonstrative pronoun is correlate to it, it is, in the direct singular, always tiḥ, not suh or sa. Thus, yih (adj. m. inan.) sōruy kur^akoṭ^a kyāzi chuh yiti pyō-mot? tiḥ nih tulith, why is all this refuse here? take it away.

In the plural nominative the masculine agrees with all masculine nouns, and the feminine agrees with all feminine nouns, without any distinction between animate and inanimate. But, if the adjective pronoun agreeing with a feminine nominative plural is separated from it by some word that does not indicate its gender by its form, then the masculine form of the plural pronoun is used instead of the feminine. Thus, tim (not tima) z^ah pacē (fem. plur. nom.), those two boards, but tima pacē, those boards. The other cases of the plural are all of common gender, and make no distinction between animate and inanimate. [For ab. generally, see Gr.M. s.v. tiḥ.]

३ ३ ६ The nineteenth consonant of the Kāshmirī alphabet in the Roman character, the eleventh when written in the Śūradā or Nāgarī character, and the ninth when written in the Perso-Arabic character. The Kāshmirī name for the character ३, as well as for च (ca), is ṣaṭuv ṣö. It has approximately the sound of ts in the English word 'catsup', but is more dental. The aspirate of ṣa is ṣha ३ ६, called in Kāshmirī ṣōṭiñ ṣhō, the twelfth consonant of the Kāshmirī alphabet when written in the Śūradā or Nāgarī character. The sound is approximately that of tsh in the English words 'cat's head', not that of 'cat-shark', but is more dental.

In some books printed in the Persian character, the letters ٢ and ٣, instead of ٢ and ٣, respectively, are used to represent these sounds.

Regarding the relationship existing between c, ch, and ṣ, ṣh, respectively, see Art. c, p. 156a, ll. 9 ff. To this may be added that it is difficult to formulate any general rule according to which, in Kāshmirī, an original c, ch, remains as c, ch, or becomes ṣ, ṣh. As a very rough rule, it may be said that, in the case of words borrowed directly from other languages, such as Persian or Sanskrit, an original c, ch, is preserved unchanged, but that when the word becomes thoroughly incorporated into the language, it tends to become ṣ. It thus happens that there are several words in an intermediate stage of adoption, in which both sounds are used at option in the same word. An example of this is the Persian word camea, a spoon, which becomes both cōca and ṣōca in Kāshmirī. As a rule, however, in most words borrowed from Persian the c is preserved unchanged. As regards words borrowed from Sanskrit, the case is different, an original c being in many instances changed to ṣ. Thus, Skt. caṇḍī > Ksh. ṣandī, N.P.; candra > ṣandar, the moon; candana > ṣandan, sandalwood; carāṇa > ṣaran, a foot; cit > ṣēth, the mind; carācāra > ṣarāṣar, the whole creation; ācamana > āṣaman, sipping; ācāra > āṣār, behaviour; gōcara > gōṣar, range; kāca > kāṣh, glass; mucukunda > muṣukund, N.P. On the other hand, Skt. chakra > Ksh. both chathar and ṣathar, an umbrella; and chala > both chal and ṣhal, deceit. Similarly, in pure Ksh. words, we have both chapun and ṣhapun, to be hidden; chör and ṣhör, hurry; cir and ṣyūr (for ṣir), a certain plant, and other such pairs.

The letters ṣ and ṣh are often of secondary origin. When a dental t or th (not the cerebral ṭ, ṭh) is followed by ü-mātrā, it becomes ṣ or ṣh, respectively. Thus, the base of rāth, night, is rāt, and this becomes rōṭ in the Nominative Plural; the ṣkat, spin, forms its 1 p.p. koṭ, with a feminine kūṭ; the Nominative Plural of kōth, a hank, is kōṣh; and the ṣwōth, rises, has its 1 p.p. wōṭh, fem. wōṣh. Again, when these letters are followed by ē (i.e. ya) or by y, they also become ṣ and ṣh, respectively, and at the same time ē becomes a, and y is dropped. Thus, the adjective tot, hot, has for its base tat. The abstract noun is formed by adding ēr (i.e. yar) to the base, and is therefore taṣar, heat, with ē becoming a; the 2 p.p. of ṣwōth is formed by adding yōv, so that it is wōṣhōv, with drooping of the y. For further particulars, see Gr.Gr. 18 ff., and Gr.M. p. 22.

ṣā ३ ६ (? ṣhā ३ ६) m. according to El. (s.v. tsān) this word means 'salt' (which is imported into Kashmīr from Ladakh and the Panjāb). The word is a corruption of the Ladakhī Tibetan tsha.

Plur. nom. tōh तृहि (Gr.Gr. 27, 87; L.V. 91; Śiv. 393, 683, 693, 883; Rām. 270, 476, 514, 528, etc.; H. viii, 3, 5, 13; xii, 1; YZ. 198);

Acc.-Dat. tōhē तृह्य (Gr.Gr. 26, 87; Śiv. 881; K. 54, 63, 89, 274, 473, 1140; H. x, 5, 12);

Gen. tuhond तुहण्ड (Gr.Gr.; Śiv. 838, 883, 1249, 1295; Rām. 270, 1299; K. 54, 274, 460; H. ii, 2; xii, 15).

Of the above forms, cyōn and tuhond are really possessive pronouns, and are dealt with separately, s.v.v., qq.v.

As in the case of other personal pronouns, this pron. has a series of pronominal suffixes used with verbs. The suff. of the sing. nom. is kh ख, of the acc. and ag. is th थ, and of the dat. y य. If the verb is in the third person, the suff. of the sing. acc. is y य, not th थ. For all cases of the plur. the suffix is wa व. These are added directly to forms ending in vowels, but, when added directly to forms ending in a consonant, the suffixes of the singular take a ṭ as a junction vowel. Examples are, in order, poku-kh पकुख, thou wentest; kara-th करथ, I shall make thee; kari-y करिय, he will make thee; koru-th कुरुथ, made by thee; karān chu-y करान चुय, he makes for thee; korⁿ-wa कुरुव, made by you; korⁿ-m-akh कुरुमख, thou wast made by me; karān chus-ath करान चुसथ, I make thee; karān chus-ay करान चुसय, I make for thee; karān chus-wa करान चुसव, I make you. The suffix kh ख when followed by another pronominal suffix beginning with a vowel becomes h ह as in karān chu-h-as (for chu-kh-as) करान चुहस, thou makest for him. For all these, see Gr.Gr. 184 ff. In villages v व is sometimes substituted for wa व, as khēyē-v खयव, she was eaten by you (H. x, 12), and in karēm-av करेमव, I made them for you (H. x, 6).

This pronoun is peculiar in that whenever it is the subject of, or is governed by, a finite verb, even if fully expressed, it must always also be represented by a suffix. It should, however, be understood that, in regard to the suffixes of the nominative case, the future indicative, the present conditional, the past conditional, and the present imperative, being already supplied with terminations indicating the person of the subject, never take any additional pronominal suffixes of the nominative. In all other circumstances the use of the suffixes of this pronoun, and of this pronoun alone, is compulsory, not optional. If, however, the pronoun is not directly governed by the verb, but is governed by a postposition, the use of the suffix is not compulsory. For examples, see Gr.M. s.v. ṭ^h.

tōhī त्रिहि । यूयम् e.g. pl. you (pl.) (as ab.), sometimes used respectfully for the singular, as in K. 933.

W, V, व, ॱ. The twentieth (or, if we count the aspirates ch, kh, ph, th, ṭh, and ṣh, and also the sibilant sh as separate letters, the twenty-seventh) consonant of the Kāshmirī alphabet when written in the Roman character, the twenty-ninth (or, if we count ṭ, ṣh, and z as separate letters, the thirty-second) consonant when written in the Śāradī or in the Nāgarī character, and the thirty-third consonant when written in the Perso-Arabic character. Its Kāshmirī name is washē wō वाश वा. It is generally sounded like the bi-labial w of Panjābī, not like the dento-labial w of English, but, as in Panjābī, the sound fluctuates between that of a sound approaching that of the English w and that of a sound approaching that of an English v. As a rule, the v-sound is heard before a palatal vowel or semi-vowel, such as e, i, ü, or y, or when it is final, while the w-sound is heard in all other cases. Thus, the name of the chief river of Kashmīr (the Jehlam of India) is Vēth, not Wēth; 'he will become' is bōvi, not bōci; karawun, a doer, has its feminine karavūn; 'he became' is bōvyōv, not bōcyōw; and the word for 'wind' is wāv, not wāw. Examples of the w-sound are the first letter in wāv, just quoted; rawa, a blanket; wōpazun, to become; and rāwun, to be lost. In this dictionary, I have endeavoured throughout to represent the w-sound by w, and the v-sound by v, but I fear that I have not always been consistent, and that, especially in the earlier pages, I have sometimes written w when I should have written v, but such slips can easily be corrected by paying attention to the foregoing rules.

The character wa is also used to represent the vowel-sound of ō or, when modified by a mātrā-vowel, of ō or ō (see page 4b, ll. 3 ff.). This only occurs when the wa immediately follows a consonant, in which case it has this force alone and is never used with a consonantal force. Thus, wuvun, to become, is bōwun, not būwun; chukh, a wound, is chōkh, not chukh; dōd, milk, is dōd, not dūd, and so on, whenever wa immediately follows a consonant. If, however, a wa is initial, or immediately follows a vowel, it retains the sound of wa, as in wavun wawun, to sow; korⁿwa, he was made by you.

As explained on pp. 4b, ll. 11 ff., and 5a, ll. 47 ff., the sounds of ō and u are interchangeable in Kāshmirī, both in speaking and writing. Indeed, most Kāshmirīs seem to be unable to distinguish between the two, the sound that to English ears appears to be that of ō being that most commonly used for both. Hence, when a word containing the letter ō is not found in the present work, it should be looked for as if it had u instead of ō, and vice versa.

In Kāshmirī, neither ō nor u can begin a word, a w being prefixed to these sounds when they occur in such a position, though often omitted in writing. Thus, the Skt. upāya, a device, becomes in Ksh. wupāy वुपाय or wōpāy वुपाय, and the Skt. udāharana, an example, becomes wudāharan वुदाहरन or wōdāharan वुदाहरन.

wōñ वञ् or (vill.) wōh व्ह (q.v.) । अधुना adv. now, at this time (El. woin, wūn; Gr.Gr. 156; Gr.M.; W. 94, wōni; Śiv. 11, 69, 70, 72, 91, 131, 202, 335, 361, 378, 415-6, 425, 539, etc., passim; Rām. 114, 126, 161, 164, 199, 200, 271, 334, 395, 468, 490, 506, etc., passim; K. 307, 473, 587, 796, 1023; H. v, 6; vii, 26; viii, 7; YZ. 94, 230). The underlying implication of this word is that the action referred to has not previously existed, but is now begun, and, if the verb is in a future tense or in the imperative, will be carried on in future. Thus wōñ kari implies that (he has hitherto not done it) but will now do it (so Śiv. 69, 70, 72, etc.; Rām. 202, 234, 241, 293-4, 300, 340, 475, 489, etc.; K. 89, 471).

wuñ वञ् or wuñē वञ् । अधुनैव adv. even now, at this very time (excluding all implication of past or future time), now (El. wunyi; Gr.Gr. 156; Gr.M.; W. wun; L.V. 99, wuñē; Śiv. 318, 943, wuñ; 210, 1217, 1294, 1598, wuñē; Rām. 146, 150, 173, 268, 361, 365, 505, 553-4, 556, etc., wuñ; 216, 289, 357, 674, 691, 1488, 1490, 1495, 1523, 1622-3, wuñē; K.

66, 264, 357, 363, 565, 633, wuñē; H. (wuñ) ii, 5; iii, 1, 2; v, 5, 6, 8; viii, 7, 10-1; ix, 4, 6; x, 5-7; xii, 6, 15, 18-9; (wuñē) x, 1; YZ. (wuñih) 546; K.Pr. 13 (wūni)). -kēñ -क्वन् adv. now at present, etc., see wuñēkēñ.

wuñ^ukuy वुन्युकुय । आधुनिकः adj. (f. wuñ^uc^uy वुन्युकुय), of, or belonging to, the present time, of nowadays.

wuñis-tām वुनिस-ताम् or -tāmāth -तामथ । वर्तमानकालपर्यन्तम् adv. up to now, hitherto (in time) (W. 94, wuniuktām, for wuñuk^u tām; K.Pr. 236, wunuktām).

wōn^u 1 वोन् m. the form which pōñ^u, water, takes when it is the second member of a compound word. See p. 746b, ll. 37 ff. Numerous examples are there given, and the following are here given in addition:—gōlin-w^o, p. 285b, l. 36; māṭi-w^o, p. 602a, l. 50; pāñē-w^o, p. 748a, l. 46; ras^uri-w^o, p. 844a, l. 40; sābūñ^u-w^o, p. 862b, l. 5; shēkar-w^o, p. 878b, l. 44; shīna-w^o, p. 885a, l. 18; shrāna-w^o, p. 893b, l. 39; shrōṣi-w^o, p. 896a, l. 43; shōṭh-w^o, p. 899b, l. 37; sēki-w^o, p. 905a, l. 16; sēnda-w^o, p. 918b, l. 28; s^usari-w^o, p. 942a, l. 17; sōta-w^o, p. 947a, l. 7; siwan-w^o, p. 954a, l. 31; tata-w^o, p. 1039b, l. 31; ṣhēṭi-w^o, p. 1066b, l. 7; ṣitra-w^o, p. 1087a, l. 46; wuga-w^o, p. 1101b, l. 15; wājī-w^o, p. 1107a, l. 18; wanda-w^o, p. 1122b, l. 28; vētha-w^o, s.v. vēth; watakh-w^o, s.v. watakh (W. 115, wōn^u).

wā 1 वाँ (for 2, see wōn^u 2, for 3, see s.v.). We have seen above that pōñ^u becomes wōn^u when the second member of a compound word. As explained on p. 746b, ll. 35 ff. when pōñ^u is the first member of a compound word, it becomes pā, as in pā-aṭh, a water-flood, and numerous other examples given on p. 747a, ll. 25 ff. There remains the case when pōñ^u is not only the second member of a compound word, but is followed by a third member,—when in fact it falls in the middle of a compound word. In such case it becomes wā 1. Examples are kāndi-wā-dul^u, a cauldron-water-cistern, i.e. a vat for storing water for cooking purposes, p. 455a, l. 4; kāndi-wā-mandul^u, pot-water-scouring, i.e. scouring out a pot with water, p. 455a, l. 7; ṣhēṭi-wā-dul^u, a tub for dirtied water, p. 1066b, l. 3. wōn^u 2 वोन् । वणिक्, साध्याचारः m. (sg. abl. wāñi वाणि). When this word is the first or middle member of a compound word it generally takes the form wā 2 वाँ (Gr.Gr. 74); for wā 1, see wōn^u 1, for 3, see s.v. For examples, see bel. The fem. of this word is wāñēñ वाञ्, q.v.) a shopkeeper (cf. wān 1), trader,

met. a decent respectable man (of a quiet, self-restrained, and patient character). wōn̄ wānūr वोन् वानूर् । वणिक्वृत्तिः m. a man whose profession is shopkeeping, esp. a seller of such articles as oils, spices, or the like, a grocer.

wā 2 वाँ. Examples of this word used as the first member of a compound word are:— wā-burza वाँ-बुर्ज । भूर्जपत्रविशेषः m. shopkeeper's birch-bark, birch-bark used for paper, as sold in shops, a superior kind of birch-bark, smooth, clean, and wide, suitable for wrapping up parcels; cf. burza-wōn̄, p. 131a, l. 7. -chān -चान् । मुखतवा m. a head carpenter, the foreman carpenter (or architect-builder) employed in building a house. -dyol^a -दयलु । तृणविशेषः m. a kind of grass used by shopkeepers for tying up parcels of condiments or the like; cf. wāna-dēl̄, p. 1121a, l. 1. -gand -गन्ड । सुदृढबन्धः m. the tying up of a load or parcel, when it is securely done. -pacē -पच । साधुशीलः m. one who is born in a family whose occupation is shopkeeping; one who is of decent respectable family (in this sense used esp. in discussing proposals of marriage or the like). -phuṭājī -फुटंजि or -phuṭūj^u -फुटंजू । वणिक्पोटलिका f. a shopkeeper's parcel, a parcel wrapped up in birch-bark, or the like, as delivered to a customer by a shopkeeper; met. a similar unopened parcel. -tōn̄ -तोन् । साधुशीलता m. (in reference to some particular person) decent, respectable character (in all dealings). -tathul^a -टठुलु । वणिक्पात्रविशेषः m. a tub or trough in which a shopkeeper stores for sale his supply of flour or the like.

wōn̄ⁱ-dān वाजि-दान । वणिक्कुक्षी m. y 1 य ي. The twenty-first (or, if we count the aspirates ch, kh, ph, th, ṭh, and ṣh, and also the sibilant sh, as separate letters, the twenty-eighth) consonant of the Kāshmirī alphabet when written in the Roman character, the twenty-sixth (or, if we count t, tsh, and z, as separate letters, the twenty-ninth) consonant when written in the Śāradā or Nāgarī character, and the thirty-fifth consonant when written in the Perso-Arabic character. Its Kāshmirī name is yāwa yō याव या, and it is sounded like the y in the English word 'yes'.

As in the case of the letters ñ and sh, the inherent vowel of this letter is ě, not a, so that य must be transliterated yě, not ya. Thus, for example, यक्, bad, is in this Dictionary transliterated yěch, not yach; यव, yesterday, is transliterated yěwa; and नियम, a rule, is transliterated niyēm.

When the syllable yě immediately follows a consonant, it is sounded as ě, not as yě, and is, in fact, the usual representative of the vowel ě in writing. Thus, यक् is the only way of spelling Věth, the Ksh. name of the River Jihlam, and यन represents běñě, a sister. For the further changes of this ě under the influence of mātrā-vowels, see p. 3a, ll. 14 ff. In the Perso-Arabic character, the sound of ě is represented by zēr, so that for these two words we have य and न, respectively.

In Kāshmirī, the sounds of ě, i, and ī cannot begin a word or syllable. Even if they are so written, they are always, in such a position, sounded as if a y was prefixed. Thus, initial ě is sounded as yě, initial i as yī, and initial ī as yī. In this way ēr, wool, is pronounced yēr; ih, this, is pronounced yih; and īran, an anvil, is pronounced yīran. In the Śāradā or Nāgarī character, such an initial letter is optionally written with or without the य, so that these three words may be written ए or ये, or इ or यि, or ई or यी, respectively, but they are always pronounced with the initial y, as yēr, yih, and yīran, and are so spelt in the Roman character in this Dictionary. In the Perso-Arabic character, the initial y is usually written as in يیر, يہ, يیرن, respectively. The only exceptions occur in the transliteration of a few Sanskrit words, as in यिषोर, for yīshōr, i.e. Skt. īśvara.

Kāshmirī follows other Dardic languages in optionally inserting a y-sound before a non-initial u-sound, exactly as in English the word 'duty' is pronounced 'dyuty'. As the insertion of this y-sound is optional, and largely depends upon the personal equation of the speaker, it is rarely indicated in writing, but written doublets do occasionally occur, such as tuz or tyuz, a radish, and tūth or tyūth, a certain bird. Extreme instances of this are found in the Kāshmirī words for 'thou' and 'two'. The original word for 'thou' was tū. This became tyū, but under the ordinary phonetic rules of the language (cf. p. 960a, l. 26) the ty became t, so that tyū became tū. Then, under another phonetic rule, ū became a (cf. mātra < mūtra, sātra < sūtra, and the Persian pronunciation of tū, thou, and dū, two, as tū and dū, respectively), so that the next stage was tā. To this, in order to aid the pronunciation, hā-ě-nukhtafi was added, and the final Kāshmirī form is tāh. It may be added that, while this word is usually written तह or तूह in the Śāradā or Nāgarī character, in some MSS. we find the word regularly written तु or चु. The history of the word for 'two' follows exactly the same lines, viz. dū > dyū > zū > zā > zāh.

y 2 य or yi 1 यि, a representation of the Persian izāfat when following a vowel, as in hawāla-y-khōdā, in the care of God (H. x, 7); wāda-y-khōdā, an oath of (i.e. by) God (H. xii, 7, 15); dwā-yi-khōr, a prayer for welfare (H. i, 3); hawā-yi-asman, the air of heaven (H. ii, 6).

contrasted with another's inability), as in yā-tay korum, nata kār'zi-hē, note that I did (it), otherwise thou shouldst have done (it) (implying that the speaker had been able to do it, but that the person addressed had been unable); so, yā-tay khyōn, na-ta khēta, note that he ate (it), otherwise eat (it thyself) (implying that while he could eat it, the person addressed could not) (El. yātai, or, and, (?) yātu, except; W. 99 yātai, either, or; K. 869). yā . . . yā ya . . . ya, either . . . or (W. 152; Rām. 371, 1364; H. x 3, 7; xii, 9).

yōgy योग्य adj. e.g. fitting, worthy, proper (as in karun^u y^o, worthy to be done; dandās y^o, worthy of punishment) (Gr.M.).

[Sg. nom. an. and inan. e.g. yih इह or (vill.) yuh 1 युह, yuh^u 1 इहु or yüh^u यहु, also (in compounds) written yi इ. Acc.-dat. an. e.g. yimis इमिस्, or nōmis न्वमिस्, or (vill.) nēmis न्वमिस्; inan. yith इथ्, or nōth न्वथ्, or (vill.) nēth न्वथ्. Ag. an. and inan. m. yimiⁱ इमि or nōmiⁱ न्वमि, f. yimi इमि or nōmi न्वमि. Abl. an. and inan. e.g. yimi इमि, yiwa इव, or nōmi न्वमि. Gen. an. e.g. yimi-sond^u इमि-सन्दु, yisond^u इसन्दु, or nōmi-sond^u न्वमि-सन्दु; inan. yimyuk^u इम्युकु or nōmyuk^u न्वम्युकु. In the plural there is no distinction between an. and inan., and gender is distinguished only in the nominative case. Thus, nom. m. yim इम, f. yima इम; or m. nōm न्वम, f. nōma न्वम. Acc.-dat. yiman इमन् or nōman न्वमन्. Ag. and abl. yimau इमौ or nōmau न्वमौ. Gen. yiman-hond^u इमन्-हन्दु or yihond^u इहन्दु, or nōman-hond^u न्वमन्-हन्दु or nōhond^u न्वहन्दु. For most of the above forms, see Gr.Gr. 89, 90, and Gr.M. See also the references below.]

In the sing. this pronoun is an. or inan., and the an. forms in some cases distinguish between the masc. and fem. genders. As regards the plur., in this respect, see ab. In both numbers, it will be observed that, except in the nom. sing., an otherwise obsolete base nōth न्वथ्, etc., can be used instead of the more regular forms yith इथ्, etc. This is most common in the sing., and is chiefly colloquial.

When written in the Nāgarī character, all the forms of this pronoun are usually written with an initial इ (instead of यि) in order to distinguish it from the Relative Pronoun yih 2 यिह.

When this word is used as an adjective pronoun, the inan. forms yith इथ् and nōth न्वथ् are employed when agreeing with an inan. noun of either gender in the dative singular. Thus, yith kulis इथ् कुलिस or nōth kulis न्वथ् कुलिस, to this tree. When agreeing with a genitive, the usual rule for adjectives is observed. Thus, yimis (or nōmis) sōhiba-sond^u इमिस् (न्वमिस्) सौहिब-सन्दु of this gentleman, but yimi (or nōmi) cizuk^u इमि (न्वमि) चीजुकु of this thing.

In the plural nominative the masculine agrees with all masculine nouns, and the feminine agrees with all feminine nouns, without any distinction between animate and inanimate. But, if the adjective pronoun agreeing with a feminine nominative plural is separated from it by some word that does not indicate its gender by its form, then the masculine form of the plural pronoun is used instead of the feminine. Thus, yim (not yima) z^{ah} pacē (fem. nom. plur.)

इम (not इम) जह पच, these two boards, but yima pacē इम पच, these boards. The other cases of the plural are all of common gender, and make no distinction between animate and inanimate. [For ab. generally, see Gr.M., s.v. yih 1.]

yiṃ 2 चिह्, for yih + ay चिह् + अय्, if this.
yih 2 चिह् । यत् pron. rel. who, which, that.

[Sg. nom. an. m. yus युस् or yus^u चिसु; f. yōssa च्वस्स or (vill.) yēssa यस्स; inan. yih चिह्, also (in compounds) written yi चि, or (old) yuh^u 2 युहु or yuh 2 युह. Acc.-dat. an. e.g. yēmis यमिस् or yēs यस्; inan. yēth यथ्. Ag. an. m. yēmⁱ यमि; f. yēmⁱ यमि; inan. yēmⁱ यमि. Abl. an. and inan. e.g. yēmⁱ यमि or yēwa यव. Gen. an. e.g. yēmⁱ-sond^u यमि-सन्दु, yēsond^u यस्न्दु, or yēs यस्; inan. yēmyuk^u यम्युक. In the plural there is no distinction between an. and inan., and gender is distinguished only in the nominative case. Thus, nom. m. yim चिम, f. yima चिम. Acc.-dat. e.g. yēman यमन् or yiman चिमन्. Ag. and abl. yēmau यमौ or yimau चिमौ. Gen. yē(yi)man-hond^u य(चि)मन्-हन्दु or yihond^u चिहन्दु. For most of the above forms, see Gr.Gr. 88-9 and Gr.M. See also the references below.]

In the sing. this pronoun is an. or inan., and the an. forms in some cases distinguish between the masc. and the fem. genders. As regards the plural, see ab.

When this word is used as an adjectival pronoun, the inanimate forms, with one exception, are not employed. The exception is yēth यथ्, the inan. dat. sing. It is used as an adj. when agreeing with an inan. noun of either gender in the dat. sing. In other cases (except in the old language of L.V.), when an adjectival use is required, the animate forms are employed, according to gender, whether agreeing with an animate or inanimate noun, as in yus sōhib, what gentleman, i.e. the gentleman who; yōssa triy, the woman who; yus (not yih) jahāza, the ship which; yōssa shēlph, the art which, but (L.V. 8) yuh nām (not yus nām), the name which. An exception is that the adjectival feminine dative is yēmⁱ यमि, not yēmis यमिस्, although, when used substantively, the an. form yēmis यमिस् or yēs यस् is used for the feminine as well as for the masculine. Thus, yēmis sōhibas, to the gentleman who; yēmⁱ triyē, to the woman who. When agreeing with a genitive the usual rule for adjectives is observed. When the genitive is the genitive of a masculine singular inanimate noun, and therefore ends in uk^u, etc., the pronoun is put into the ablative singular. Thus, yēmⁱ cizuk^u, of what thing, i.e. of the thing which. When the genitive is not of this description, the pronoun is put into the dative singular, as in yēmis (or yēs) sōhiba-sond^u, of the gentleman who.

For the use of the demonstrative pronoun tih, as the correlative of this pronoun, see p. 966b, ll. 22 ff.

In the plural nominative the masculine yim चिम agrees with all masculine nouns, and the feminine yima चिम with all feminine nouns, without any distinction between animate and inanimate. But if the adjective pronoun agreeing with a feminine nominative plural is separated from it by some word that does not indicate its gender by its form, then the masculine form of the pronoun is used instead of the feminine. Thus, yima pacē, the boards which, but yim (not yima) z^h pacē, the two boards which. For ab. generally, see Gr.M., s.v. yih 2.

This pronoun is often repeated in various idiomatic senses, as in yus^u yih dapaṃ, he who will say what to thee, i.e. whoever will say anything to thee (L.V. 20); yēs yih rōṣē, to whom what is pleasing, i.e. whatever is pleasing to each (L.V. 21); yih yih karm, whatever work (L.V. 58); yuh^u yih karm, whatever act (L.V. 61); yēmⁱ yus zōn^u, he who knew whom (Śiv. 449); yēmis yēmⁱ yitshā, whoever has a wish for anything (Śiv. 1085); prayēn ōs^u yēs yih, to whomever anything was pleasing (Śiv. 1086); yus yi mangiy, whoever would ask anything from thee (Śiv. 308); yus yus, whoever (K. 430, 992); yih yih (K. 863) or yi yi (K. 323), whatever; yus yus yēth yēth kāmī lagiḥē, whoever was allotted to each particular work (K. 1067); yēs yus gashī, that which is necessary for a particular person (K.Pr. 243); yus yēs zānī, he who knows a particular person (K.Pr. 256). So yēmⁱ yitha wuch^u, as each one looked (K. 438); pazi yuth^u yēs, as is proper for each (K. 1071); yus yuth^u kari, as each one does (so will he reap) (K.Pr. 256).

to be affected (by anything) (cf. lāta y°, p. 537b, l. 11; mādi y°, p. 548b, l. 40; pēra y°, p. 752a, l. 33; prāta yinē, p. 771a, l. 21; rasa y°, p. 842a, l. 27; shōkha y°, p. 877b, l. 22; shēphi y°, p. 888a, l. 40; sōra y°, p. 931a, l. 5; thōsi y°, p. 985a, l. 42, and others) (Rām. 329; K. 13, 240, 461, 744);

to appear, become visible, turn out to be (such-and-such), seem (cf. bāḍav y°, p. 89a, l. 13; byāli y°, p. 150b, l. 43; khōsh y°, p. 418b, l. 11, and others) (Śiv. 423, 485, 806; Rām. 317; YZ. 25); to come forth, issue forth, become visible (cf. bahā y°, p. 94a, l. 23; bāmun y°, p. 108b, l. 18; mūl yinⁱ, p. 567a, l. 27; nēb y°, p. 619b, l. 29; phīna yin^u, p. 698b, l. 35; pōs^u y°, p. 777a, l. 20; sōp^anⁱ y°, p. 926b, l. 42; thānⁱ yin^u, p. 979b, l. 3; til y°, p. 998b, l. 2) (Gr.M.; Śiv. 345, 910, 1009, 1153, 1358, 1702, 1710; Rām. 4, 59, 308, 1257, 1264, 1583; K. 462, 555, 1047, 1162; H. ii, 4; x, 1, 8); to grow, increase, swell, be inflamed (cf. bāna y°, p. 109b, l. 20; tumūc^u yin^u, p. 1006a, l. 30); to rise, overflow (cf. pōn^u y°, p. 747a, l. 20; sah^alāb y°, p. 881a, l. 36); to come (on), to fit; to be bent, or set (upon) (cf. bōlas āmot^a and y°, p. 105a, ll. 25, 35); to come on, come forth, pass (as urine, etc.) (cf. bōl y°, p. 105a, l. 1) (Rām. 949).

With the present participle of another verb yun^a forms what some writers on Indian languages call 'Statical compounds', as in ḍēkⁱ ḍēkⁱ karān y°, to come along with the forehead (on the ground), p. 204b, l. 43; lōrān y°, to be in a condition of wasting away, gradually to waste away, p. 532a, l. 27; sōrān y°, to become gradually used up, p. 937a, l. 12; ṣālān y°, to come hurriedly, p. 1071b, l. 17 (Śiv. 101, 880, 1380, 1528, 1653; Rām. 207, 337, 362, 910, 915, 983, 1108, 1118, 1143a, g, 1148, 1193, 1308, 1338, 1406, 1699; K. 417; H. viii, 6).

With the conjunctive participle of another verb, yun^a forms what some writers on Indian languages call 'Intensive compounds', as in banith y°, to turn out well, p. 114a, l. 14; pōr dith y°, to act as if certain to have a long life, p. 753b, l. 14; pisith yun^a, to be on the point of boiling over, p. 783b, l. 10; thakun nīrith y°, fatigue to come out, i.e. to become manifest, p. 973b, l. 49; ṣasith y°, to come in fits of laughter, p. 1084b, l. 35. Some of these examples are not strictly intensive compounds, but are ordinary phrases, in which each word retains its own meaning, but it is not always easy to make the distinction (Śiv. 97, 999, 1585, 1704; Rām. 112, 271, 276, 282, 311, 339, 404, 483, 515, 594, 753, 766, 1091, 1223, 1241, 1455, 1543, 1679, 1684, 1714; K. 147, 226, 235, 624, 706, 846, 961, 1060; H. v, 1, 4, 10; xii, 12; YZ. 139, 178; K.Pr. 57). Sometimes we have the freq. part. instead of the conj. part. as in Śiv. 1245. Note hēth yun^a, to bring, equivalent to the Hindi lē ānā or lānā (Śiv. 76, 668, 718, 720, 723, 730, 1667, 1831, 1836, 1856; Rām. 96, 361, 382, 659, 794, 834, 943, 1110, 1120, 1143 i, 1144, 1440, 1464, 1631; K. 37, 337, 391, 415, 565, 685, 696, 699, 811, 871, 914, 972, 1031, 1077; H. i, 8; iii, 1; viii, 6; xii, 2, 5, 11, 12; YZ. 242).

With the oblique infinitive of another verb, yun^a makes a passive (cf. Gr.Gr. 168), as in buchana y^o, to be stung, p. 80b, l. 8; bōlas lāyēna y^o, to become fixed in obstinacy, p. 105a, l. 33; brakana y^o, to be crushed, p. 122b, l. 42; barana yun^a, to become filled, p. 110a, l. 18; p. 124b, l. 24; p. 188b, l. 16; p. 452a, l. 21; barana y^o, to become homesick (pass. of an intrans. verb), p. 124b, l. 38; bōzana y^o, to become visible (cf. Gr.Gr. 169), p. 154a, l. 8; chakana y^o, to become scattered, p. 160a, l. 13; dabawana y^o, p. 185a, l. 29; maṭi marana y^o, to become fixed on the shoulder (marun 1), p. 603a, l. 39 (where it is wrongly explained), and many others. The passive of yun^a itself, occurs in phrases such as yina yiwān chuh, it is being come by him, i.e. he is coming (Gr.Gr. 168-70; Gr.M.; Śiv. 332-3, 369, 376, 437, 665, 886, 909, 1004, 1020, 1072, 1111, 1234, 1262, 1286, 1340, 1347, 1469, 1501, 1509, 1545; Rām. 3, 56, 122, 283, 298, 805, 1241, 1446, 1569, 1670, 1719; H. vii, 26; ix, 7). The examples in K. (see bel.) are bōḍ^a-rana y^o, 358; dina y^o, 77, 844; gandana y^o, 167-8; khēna y^o, 1089; mutarana y^o, 69, 73, 681, 857; parzanana y^o, 595 (cf. parzana y^o, 583, and parzanas y^o, 397); pūzana y^o, 1042; walana y^o, 502; zēnana y^o, 823; z^a-rawana y^o, 200. Regarding the pass. of bōzun, to hear (Śiv. 85, 665, 1241; H. xii, 22), see p. 154a, l. 8. It is also used to mean 'to be considered, known, recognized (as such-and-such)' (H. viii, 5; x, 4; xii, 3). The pass. of dēshun, to see, is irregular, being drēth yun^a (see p. 254b, l. 9) (Śiv. 104, 180; Rām. 1195; K. 159, 193, 411, 434, 436-9).

Besides the above passives formed with the oblique infinitive, K. also, metri causa, optionally forms a passive with the dative of the infinitive, but only in the case of transitive verbs. The following instances occur:— baranas y^o, 507; gālanas y^o, 68; gandanas y^o, 165; karanas y^o, 628, 970; kāsanas y^o, 662; lēkhanas y^o, 848; māranas y^o, 1027; mash^a-rāwanas y^o, 861; pālanas y^o, 1042; raṭanas y^o, 163; trāwanas y^o, 861; ṭēnanas y^o, 210, 301, 311; wuchanas y^o, 295; wananas y^o, 97, 290, 296, 453, 501, 589, 614, 782-3, 847, 914, 923, 1061, 1087, 1151; waranas y^o, 781; zānanas y^o, 78, 911, 1165; zēnanas y^o, 1019. If the infinitive dative is that of an intransitive verb, it forms, with yun^a, a kind of inceptive compound; see ab., p. 1196b, l. 37. In K. 901, āv wananas is not a passive, but means 'he came to tell (the tidings)'.

āmot^a आमत् perf. part. of yun^a in all its meanings, see ab., p. 1196a, l. 41 (f. āmūt^a आमत्) (Śiv. 44, 594, 678, 820, 832, 919, 1581, 1794; Rām. 145, 351, 424, 428, 493-4, 690, 757, 760, 797, 1077, 1108e, 1181, 1359, 1470, 1631, 1672, 1684, 1707, 1730, 1746; K. 27, 642, 806, 868, 995-6, 1089, 1096, 1108; H. iii, 1; v, 5, 11; viii, 6 (= Hindi āyā huā); x, 12, 14; xii, 23).

yina-bāgē यिन-बाग्य । आगमननिमित्तकः adj. e.g. that which causes to come or is a reason for coming; cf. bōgⁱ 2. -hār -हार । लब्धुमाशंसितः n.ag. one who, or that which, is fit to come, or worthy of coming, etc., as ab. (Gr.Gr. 130); esp. (of an action, occupation, or use of something) that on obtaining which hope is fixed (with the object of profiting by its obtainment). -wōl^a -वोलु । आगमिष्यन् n.ag. z ज. The twenty-second consonant of the Kāshmirī alphabet in the Roman character, the thirteenth when written in the Śāradā or Nāgarī character, and the sixteenth when written in the Perso-Arabic character. The Kāshmirī name for the character ज is zāyⁱ zō, which is also used for the character ज (ja). It is pronounced like z in the English word 'zeal'. The characters z and ज are also used to represent the sound of the Persian or Arabic ز (zāl), ض (zād), and ذ (zā), which, in Kāshmirī written in the Perso-Arabic character, occur only in words borrowed from one or other of these languages. In such cases they are pronounced in Kāshmirī like an ordinary z.

Regarding the relationship between j and z, see Art. j, p. 369a, ll. 28 ff. As there explained, it is difficult to formulate any general rule according to which, in Kāshmirī, an original j remains as j or becomes z, or vice versa. As a rough guide it may be stated that, in the case of words borrowed from Persian, an original j or z usually remains unchanged, but that, when such a word becomes thoroughly incorporated into the Kāshmirī, j tends to become z. The same is true of words borrowed from Sanskrit, so far as regards the change of j to z. It thus happens that there are several words in an intermediate stage of adoption, in which both sounds are employed at option in the same word. Thus, the Persian word judā, apart, becomes, in Kāshmirī, both judā and zudā, and jigar, the liver, becomes both jigar and zigar. As a rule, however, in most words borrowed from Persian or from Arabic through Persian, a j is preserved unchanged. As exceptions may be noted such words as jūlān, fetters, which appears in Kāshmirī as zōlāna, and maujūd, existing, Ksh. mūzūd. As regards words borrowed from Sanskrit, the case is different. While in many instances an original j of that language is preserved, in many other words directly borrowed from that language, an original j becomes z. Such, for instance, are:—

jambukēśvara-, Ksh. zambukēshōr, N.P.; Skt. jāmbavān, Ksh. zāmbawān, N.P.; Skt. janaka-, Ksh. zanakh, N.P.; Skt. jaṭā, Ksh. zaṭh, matted hair; Skt. jitēndriya-, Ksh. zitēndriy, one who has conquered his passions; Skt. jīva-, Ksh. zīv (compared with true Ksh. zuv), life; Skt. jīvana-, Ksh. zīwan, life; Skt. jvālā, Ksh. zwālā, glow; Skt. jyēsthā, Ksh. zyēsthā, N.P.; Skt. ajāmila-, Ksh. azāmil, N.P.; Skt. ajapā, Ksh. azapā, silent prayer; Skt. bhujā-, Ksh. bōz, the arm; Skt. bhōjana-, Ksh. bōzan, food; Skt. dhvaja-, Ksh. dōz, a flag; Skt. kujāta-, Ksh. kōzāth, baseborn; Skt. lajjā, Ksh. lazzā (compared with the true Ksh. laz), shame, and many others.

The letter z is often of secondary origin. If a dental d (not the cerebral ḍ) is followed by ü-mātrā, it becomes z. Thus the Nominative Plural of grand, counting, is grünz^u, and the 1 p.p. of √lad-, build, is lod^u, with a feminine lüz^u. When it is followed by ē (i.e. ya) or by y, it also becomes z, the ē becoming a, and the y being dropped. Thus the base thad-, high, forms its abstract noun by adding ēr (yar), and becomes thazar, height, and the 2 p.p. of √lad-, formed by adding yōv, is lazōv. For further particulars, see Gr.Gr. 28 ff. and Gr.M. p. 22.

zā जा (of. zāv 2 p.p. of zyon^u, q.v.) in the following:—
zā-dōh जा-दुह् । जन्मदिवसः m. a birthday. -khōb^u -खुब् । जातशिरस्त्राणः m. a wadded cap for a newly born child. -kalapush^u -कलपुशु । जातशिरस्त्राणः m. a kind of small cap for the same. -phal -फल । जातीफलम् m. the nutmeg, Myristica moschata, which is commonly presented on festive occasions, such as a birth celebration or marriage (cf. *bröl*ⁱ-z^o, p. 1082a, l. 19). -phēran -फेरन् । जातोपयोगिवस्त्रम् f. a tiny garment for a newly born child (L. 259 zafiru). -wār -वार । जन्मवारः f. the day of the week on which a person is born.

zai जी interj. victory!, i.q. jai, q.v. (Śiv. 1698, 1701, 1714, 1729).

zē 2 ज्य (= ज), prep. from (another form of az 2, q.v.) (Rām. 49, zē brahmāh, from Brahmā).

zi जि, conj. that (W. 100). Employed with various forces (see Gr.M. for details).

It is used as a declarative conj. annexing the substance of a speech, etc., to the principal sentence, as in tāmⁱ mōn^a zi yi chuh poz^a, he affirmed that this is true; tas prīth zi cyōn^a nāv kyāh chuh, ask him what is his name (lit. ask him that what is your name). Note that in such cases, as in India Proper, the subordinate sentence is introduced in direct narration. Similarly after verbs expressing necessity, propriety, doubt, intention, and many others for which see Gr.M. s.v. (Śiv. 679, 1232; Rām. 360, 1108, 1137, 1671; K. 9, 63, 65, 66, 104, 113, etc.).

As a consecutive conj., that, so that, as in bōh dōryōs tyūt^a zi shāh gōm band, I have run so much that I have lost my breath (so L.V. 48; Rām. 261, 671, 737, 1133, 1400, 1546, 1659; K. 97, 295, 405, etc.; K.Pr. (zih) 95).

As a final conj., that, in order that, as in sa chēh mēh^anath karān, zi pananis pānas rachī, she labours in order that she may support herself (K. 19, 38, 127, 163, etc.).

As a causal conj., that, because that, as in kyāh sabab chuh zi t^ah rōzakh-na, what is the reason that thou wilt not remain; so yimi-kinⁱ zi, for this that, i.e. for which reason, wherefore (Śiv. 794, 841; Rām. 382; K. 169, 289, 694, etc.).

As a temporal conj., that, since, as in kēh dōh gay zi suh āv, some days have passed since he came.

As a conj. introducing a subordinate question, as in wuch zi t^ah hēkakha būzith, see if thou canst understand.

When zi is added to kyāh, the compound kyā-zi, what that? means 'why?', see s.v., p. 502b, l. 44.

When zi is prefixed to a relative pronoun, which is preceded, not followed, by its antecedent, it is almost pleonastic in its force. If anything, it gives a certain indefiniteness to the pronoun, as in zi yus, quasi 'anyone who' or 'whoever'. Thus tim chih timan ṭhagān zi yiman ṭhagith hēkān chih, they cheat anyone they can.

shūlⁿ शूल or shūrⁿ शूर, in wūrⁿ-sh^o, see p. 1138b, ll. 45, 49.

p. 4a, l. 18. Omit the words 'and that spelling will be followed in this dictionary'. As the work progressed, typographical exigencies have often compelled me to abandon this rule, and to adopt the spelling indicated by कितु, rather than that indicated by कृतु.

p. 6a, l. 34. Read 'बुद्धिहीनः'. p. 7a, l. 11. After 'cloud', add '(Śiv. 1249, 1300)'. p. 7b, l. 17. The article abāshun is in wrong order. It should follow line 6 of the same column. p. 8a, l. 6. After 'yōga' add '(Śiv. 1060)'. p. 8a, l. 14. As an additional meaning of āchi diñ, add 'to give an eye, bestow sight (Śiv. 916, 936)'. p. 8a, ll. 47-8. After 'a sign with the eyes', add '(Śiv. 1209)'. p. 8b, l. 33. After 'discovery' add '(Śiv. 873)'. p. 8b, l. 43. Read 'tōwarūñ'. p. 9a, l. 34. After 'أحد' add 'or (Rām. 564, 913, 1073) āchīdar अहिदर'. p. 12a, l. 29. Read '-tōw'. p. 13a, l. 21. Add '-kyāzi -क्याज़ि adv. then why? (Śiv. 1652, 1862)'. p. 13b, l. 6. For '-सूर', read '-सूर'. p. 14b, l. 46. After 'blood', add '(Rām. 213)'. p. 15a, l. 13. Read 'adōñ^ēru-y'. p. 15a, l. 34. An optional spelling of odur is od^or अदूर (Śiv. 1650). p. 15b, l. 50. Add, as a further meaning of adwaith, 'the Deity in his monistic aspect, He who alone exists (Śiv. 512, 1402, 1604)'. p. 16b, l. 30. Read '(sg. dat. ag^anas अग्नस् or agnas अग्नस् (Śiv. 124), abl. ag^ana अग्न or agna अग्न, pl. nom. ag^an अग्न, and so on)'. So also correct l. 34, and the cross-reference on p. 17a, l. 8. p. 17a, l. 12. For 'agōr अगोर', read 'agōr अगोर (Śiv. 775, 975) or agūr अगूर (Śiv. 48, 329)'. p. 17b, l. 30. Add 'cf. wahal'. p. 18a, l. 12. With the word ōh-nōj, cf. wōnōj. p. 18a, l. 25. Add, as a further meaning of ahār karun, 'to use as food (Śiv. 208, 1119, 1524)'. p. 18b, l. 1. An optional form of oh^oryund is yohuryund, q.v. p. 19b, l. 1. Read '-tōw'. p. 19b, l. 5. After 'time', add '(El. auksōr, uhtsōr)'. p. 19b, l. 13. Read '-zūnj' -ज़ुंज'. p. 19b, l. 28. Read 'अँ'. p. 20a, l. 27. For 'akⁱ', read 'ākⁱ'. p. 21a, l. 6. After 'ōkhir', add 'or (Rām. 321, 628, etc.) ōkh^ur'. p. 21a, l. 7. Add, as a further meaning of akahār, 'a dancing arena, a stage (for dancing) (Śiv. 1456)'. p. 21b, l. 45. For '48', read '28'. p. 22b, l. 32. For '-thapas -चपस्', read '-thapi -चपि'. p. 23a, l. 33. After 'plough', add '(Śiv. 1531)'. p. 25b, l. 30. After 'f.', add '(pl.

nom. ālūs आलूस, K. 1014)'. p. 27a, l. 29. For 'cup', read 'platter'. p. 27a, l. 38. A variant spelling of amōb is amōb अमोब (K. 380, 387). p. 29a, l. 10. After 'efficacy', add '(Śiv. 816)'. p. 29a, l. 19. For '522', read '622'. p. 29b, l. 1. Read 'āma-tāv'. p. 29b, l. 4. Read 'amāwasy अमावस्य'. p. 30b, l. 42. For 'm.pl.', read 'f.pl.'. p. 31a, l. 42. Read 'anubav'. p. 32a, l. 12. For '334', read '333'. p. 32a, l. 37. For '763', read '766'. p. 33a, l. 2. Read 'nēb^aryum' नैब्युमु'. p. 35b, ll. 9 ff. Omit the article anta. p. 35b, ll. 19, 29. For 'anta', read 'anth'. See Addenda. p. 35b, l. 26, read '-रसु'. p. 38a, l. 45. A variant spelling of āpharī is āpharīn (Rām. 706, 792). p. 39a, l. 21. A variant spelling of apōr is apōr अपोर (Rām. 1590). p. 39a, l. 26. After 'cross', add '(Śiv. 245)'. p. 41a, l. 20. The sub-article ara wālāñē is wrongly placed. It should come under article ūr 3, p. 42b, l. 5. p. 41b, l. 18. After 'indefinitely', add '; in any direction, i.e. on all sides (K. 656)'. p. 41b, l. 21. After 'there', add 'cf. wōda'. p. 41b, l. 32. Read '-yōr-योर'. p. 41b, l. 38. After 'ōr 2 ओर' insert '(cf. wōra)'. p. 42a, l. 9. The sg. dat. ag. and abl., and pl. nom. of zām is best spelt zōm जाम, which Pandits generally write zōm ज़ोम. For the other cases of the pl. see s.v. zām. p. 42a, l. 33. After 'El.', add 'er'. p. 43b, l. 49. Read 'ar-māta'. p. 44a, l. 45. For '1640', read '1648'. p. 45a, l. 26. After 'purpose', add, as a further meaning, 'riches, worldly prosperity (Śiv. 1798)'. Note that, in Rām. 1187, 'arth' is spelt 'ar^ath'. p. 48a, l. 17. For '255', read '1255'. p. 48b, l. 19. After 'ओशद्', add 'or (K. 973) aushēd औशद्'. p. 52b, l. 37. Before 'atiy 1', add 'ātⁱ अति (Rām. 1184, 1360) or'. p. 63b, l. 17. Read 'sg. dat. -trīnis -त्रिनिस्, abl. -trēni -त्रेनि'. p. 64b, l. 15. For 'empty a coal-box', read 'stir up the burning coals in a brazier'. p. 66a, l. 40. Omit '543, 620'. p. 66b, l. 37. For 'rēt^u', 'rēs^u', read 'rēt^u', 'rēs^u'. p. 69a, l. 45. After 'अतवार' insert 'or (Rām. 384) atwār'. p. 71b, l. 9. After 'अवार' insert 'or (Rām. 1705) āwāra'. p. 73a, l. 50. For '1413', read '1483'. p. 74a, l. 14. For 'to-morrow', read 'the day after to-morrow'. See p. 434a, l. 46. p. 74a, l. 28. For '1436', read '1486'. p. 75a, l. 13. After 'अज़ार', add 'or āzār'.

- p. 77a, l. 43. For 'tuluk^u', read 'taluk^u'. p. 80a, ll. 22, 23. For 'böchhi', read 'böchi'. p. 82a, l. 3. For 'har 3', read 'har 4'. p. 348a, l. 49, and b, l. 1. The reference 'Rām. 109' should be transferred to hōrinjū. With the forms hōricū and hōrinjū, compare mōrinj, which represents the Skt. mārica. p. 349b, l. 37. Add 'Cf. hōrun nakha wālun (L. 459), p. 1115a, l. 10'. p. 368a, ll. 1, 6, 10, 14. Read 'hyuw'. p. 372b, l. 44, and p. 373a, l. 41. The correct meaning of jilb or jilav is 'a horse's bridle, rein', not 'flank' as given (cf. K.Pr. 261). The meaning 'flank' is derivative, and hardly accurate. p. 373a, l. 3. Omit the figures '1078'. p. 373a, l. 39. The correct meaning of jilav, as in the case of jilb, is 'bridle'. p. 378b, l. 21. After 'l. 30', add 'and ruma-jath, p. 834a, l. 8'. p. 385b, l. 10. In Rām. 531, the spelling karun, for kaḍun, is also used. p. 386a, l. 20. For '910', read '950'. p. 395a, l. 38. After 'El.', add 'cf. tōs', p. 1037a, l. 49. p. 400b, l. 1. An alternative spelling of khum is khumb खुम्, cf. p. 838a, l. 44. p. 404a, l. 21. For '1434', read '434'. p. 408a, l. 3. For '-waṭi -वटि', read '-waṭas -वटस्'. p. 410b, ll. 33 ff. The articles khōr, khōrⁱ, and khōrⁱ are wrongly placed. They should come at the foot of p. 411a. p. 410b, l. 40. After 'p. 83b, l. 9', add 'and waṭa-kh^o, p. 1157a, l. 4'. p. 411a, l. 48. After '(H. ix, 9);' add 'tr^akhōr', p. 1024a, l. 40. p. 411a, l. 50. After 'grāṭa-khōr', add 'and (p. 1206b, l. 4) yēci-khōr' p. 422a, l. 23. After 'p. 99b, l. 49', add 'and wōlinjē-kh^o, p. 1115b, l. 34'. p. 422a, l. 40. Read 'āzōdī'. p. 425a, l. 2. The Dictionary of the Kashmiri Language is one of the most outstanding and successful achievements in the field of reference books. It contains a transliteration of Kashmiri words in Roman language, its Sanskrit and Hindi synonyms and the meanings and explanations of the words in English. It is basically designed to meet the needs of the users who are conversant with Kashmiri, Hindi, Sanskrit and English languages.

This Dictionary has the added advantage of securing the services of renowned and learned Kashmiri Pandits well versed in Kashmiri and Sanskrit languages and compiled by an eminent scholar and expert of languages.

Additional pages in the Dictionary highlight the Grammatical Nomenclature and include the Kashmiri Alphabet in the Roman Character with its equivalents in the Nagari and Persian Characters.

The reprinted edition of this Dictionary, a brilliant accomplishment based on authentic information, will continue to fill up the gap of a valuable addition to the literature of an important but little-known language of the world.
